

CAMBRIC, kām'brīk. - A general term applied to the finest and thinnest of plain woven linen fabrics. It is said to be derived from Cambrai (France), where such goods were first made. Some of the finest cambrics of the present day are produced in Switzerland. The term is also applied to cloth made of cotton with the fibre twisted very hard, to imitate real or linen cambric.