

TWEED. A twilled fabric (see WEAVING), often woven in two colors, the yarn being dyed before weaving. It is a soft, flexible, durable material, usually of wool, sometimes of cotton and wool. Its name is derived from the locality where it was first manufactured—in villages along the Tweed, in Scotland.