LACE LOVERS of the
UNITED STATES

Edited by B. E. MERRILL.

AUGUST 1917

First Edition

BELIEVING that some sort of cooperation would be mutually advantageous to those interested in hand-made lace scattered here and there over the United States, about three years ago I conceived the idea of trying to secure a complete list of these lovers of lace as a first step in some sort of organization.

Since then the "Needle and Bobbin Club" of New York City has been organized. But inasmuch as its list of members does not yet include all the lace lovers and does not differentiate between those interested in lace and those of other textile interests and does not publish complete addresses of its members, there still seemed something to be desired in the lace register. Hence, with the approval of Miss Gertrude Whiting, President of the Needle and Bobbin Club, I have continued to send out circular letters explaining my effort to publish a list of all those interested in lace in any special way—such as connoisseurs, collectors, curators, authors, lecturers, promoters, teachers, designers, buyers, menders, or makers of lace. The response has not been as general as I had hoped partly because some who doubtless intended to respond neglected to do so or failed to realize the importance of helping to make a directory as complete as possible and partly because the purpose of such a list must of necessity seem rather vague.

But with the present need of fostering every industry possible in our own country and of being intelligent concerning all products of our consumption, the getting together of the lace people of any community—who might not otherwise know about each other—may have an unforeseen significance in the preservation of this all but lost art.

I therefore appeal to every lover of lace into whose hands this humble booklet may chance to fall whose name is not already listed to send me his or her complete name and address together with such facts as would be of interest to other lace lovers. In this way it may be possible some time in the future to publish a more complete list.
