PAST PRESIDENT, IDA WOODARD, HONORED

Officials of 'Camp Allen', at Bedford, N.H. a unique summer camp for blind girls, and for the past 3 years, including boys, honored Ida Woodard by dedicating the new boys dormitory in her honor. Ida Woodard, a popular Boston area waitress, has donated all her tips to the camp for the past 20 years, dressed dolls for its "Christmas in July" Day, and provided gifts for the boys since they have been included, and has conducted a summer long yard sale from which she was able to give an additional gift this year of $1,500.00.

BOBBIN LACE PATTERN CONTEST WINNERS

The ten entries contributed to the Bobbin Lace Contest, announced in the May 1971 Bulletin, were judged by the Board of Directors of International Old Lacers. Winners were: Mrs. Gertrude Biedermann and Mrs. Martha Anderson of San Francisco, Calif. and Mrs. Marilyn Laird and Mrs. Bach of Canada. Exhibitors at Convention: Verna Aeilts, Ida Woodard, Laurie Lepoff, Kay Asahi. Lace Making Demonstrators: Bobbin Lace, Kay Asahi, Muriel Mitchell, Mildred Wilson Macrame, Olga Barnett

The President's Message

Dear Members:

August 10, 1971

It is with gratitude and happiness that I accept the commission voted upon me by our Lacers - the position of president. I have many ideas for the growth in the coming years as I believe we are in a renaissance of Bobbin Laces. At a tea, held in Burnaby on Thursday, at the home of Mrs. Mitchell, I met 33 of the 39 members of British Columbia, Canada; 3 coming 75 miles to meet me; one, Mrs. Bach, one of the prize winners was delighted and thrilled for it was the first time her work had won recognition. All these members agreed that a book of basic lessons in lace making was necessary and has pledged to help in this endeavor. Each and every member's contribution is necessary. - Can we meet the challenge? - Let's try.

Your next convention is to be in Omaha, Nebraska at the Hilton Hotel. Save your pennies - plan to attend - offer your services as a demonstrator or exhibitor. - Write Mrs. Besch on this early - Let's try for a 2 day event. I would enjoy learning some intricate way of doing a certain phase of lace - wouldn't you?

Are side trips of interest to you? Tell us. This is your annual event and I am going to put every effort into your pleasures. Feel free to write me. I'll find an answer for you. Again, it is with humble pride that I serve you as your first officer. Until we meet,

Olga Barnett

"NOTES to be RECALLED and REMEMBERED"

All publicity of your meetings when printed, is to be, and should be sent to your publicity chairman in United States or Canada, who in turn will sift and appraise it and send it on to the Historian for posterity. (Historian, Pat Harris, Ore.)

All area directors are to submit reports to the President at Annual Meeting relating to the activities within her area, such as new clubs, activities of such clubs and problems she may have had and solved, that we might keep abreast of our U.S.A. groups.

For any workshops or Conferences, exhibiting or demonstrating laces of members, "International Old Lacers" will give such credit on their programs as booth notices; as signs to I.O.L. and credit in the bulletin for such services.

Dues have advanced $50--August 1971, to $3.50. If you have paid these dues already, please forward the extra to Mrs. Downs.

Bulletins, extra single issues, have been advanced to $.35 each.

MADONNA made of BOBBIN LACE on COVER

Mrs. Emily Mortier of Moline, Illinois, says the highest number of bobbins used is 25-28 in some places, but usually 18-20 in the bulk of the work. The fill-ins require only 4 bobbins.

It takes about 2 weeks of "pretty steady" work to make this. The thread used is white linen.

This Madonna has been purchased locally and framed on velvet to be given as a treasured wedding gift. She will take orders for it at $35.00 each, but does not make any ahead of time.

BOSTON BRANCH

The Boston Branch of N.O.L. met at Louise Lund's home in Lexington, Mass. on Saturday, May 29, 1971. 16 members were present. Favours were made for the coming Annual Meeting at Los Angeles on August 3, 1971.

A delightful lunch was served by Louise Lund and Ida Woodard, president of N.O.L.

The coming Annual Meeting was discussed as were the plans being made by Ida Woodard for the success of the Annual Meeting.

New Officers for the Boston Branch were elected:

Nadine Russman, President
Mary Russo, Secretary
May Connors, Historian
Doris Miller, Treasurer

After the business meeting, Olga Barnett instructed Macrame stitches. Finished bags of macrame were shown. Slide pictures were taken of members at work. These will be added to our N.O.L. slide program on Macrame started by Virginia Harvey. Respectfully submitted, Mary Russo, Secretary

PROGRAM at CONVENTION

NOTES on LACES and the LACE MACHINE

By Louise Leonberger, a past president

At first, flax thread was coarse and heavy, but gradually became finer and finer until the fine Point which became the pride of Venice was produced.

By 1414 gold lace had become so popular in Venice that in state processions the horses' trappings were of gold and silver.

In 1481 prohibitions were laid on gold embroidered and gold trimmed garments, but even this did not halt manufacture, even though they affected heavily the workers of gold and silver thread. Even after the laws of Italy prohibited the making and wearing of gold and silver lace, threads of this material were woven into flax laces.

The earliest dated pattern book was 1527, and contained only patterns by O. Feolix.

In 1537 a book of patterns by Zoppino was published, and in 1550 Matio Pagani published his book on the art of making Guipure laces, which contained thirty-one illustrations.

In 1567 John Osatus printed his book of instructions for the home.

The most famous of the lace books was published in Paris by Frederico Vincilo, in 1587, and came in two volumes. The first edition was devoted to cut-work and the second contained instructions on laces and darned work. Most of his designs were in squares with counted stitches.

In 1596 Giacomo Franco published his patterns for bobbin laces.

The earliest Italian cut-work was called Punto Tagliato, and was on a foundation of coarse linen. This later developed into Punto Tirato, or drawn-work.

Points became popular all over Europe, and Gros Point de Venise or Venetian Rose Point was considered the most beautiful of all laces. It has a ground of brides or bars which were buttonholed over the threads. The term "Point" meant that the lace was of finest quality and made with the needle.

Incidentally, my husband and I have fifty or more live exotic birds. The orange weavers weave a buttonhole stitch with the short colored pieces of cord I give them. They fasten it to the aviary wires in the enclosed patio in the center of our home, where many of the birds are flying free. Besides these birds we have twelve cages in the bird room to change every day. We also have four beautiful humming birds from Venezuela. They are on a special formula which includes Mellins Baby Food General Protein, etc.

Punto a Groppo, was a knotted lace resembling the Guipures, and was used by the clergy for bed and table linen. Its chief characteristic was that the knots were tied by hand.

If one is in doubt as to whether filet lace is hand made or machine made, run your hands over the lace. If you do not feel knots, then it is machine made.

Punto Burano was made on the island of the same name, during the eighteenth century, and had a network ground made entirely with the needle, of finest thread. The industry was revived in 1872 in Royal Lace Schools on the Island.

Punto in Aria or "Point in Air" was made on parchment on which the design was drawn. The various parts connected with brides buttonholed and trimmed with thread loops or wheels. This developed into Punto Tagliato a Fogliama in which heavy threads were used, thus raising the pattern. The thread was called cordonnet and the outlining was known as the crowns and done on the edge of the lace.

Milan Point made in Milan during the seventeenth century was of both silver and gold thread.

Reticella was the favorite for neck veiling which was popular in the fifteenth century.

Carnival or Bride Lace was made in Italy during the sixteenth century and was really Reticella made over drawn threads. Its chief characteristic was the family initial or monogram woven in it.

About 1664 points were succeeded by straight edges both in Italy and France.

Genoa was not only famous for her lace, but gold-work and jewelry. In the fourteenth century she was one of the first to make accessories of fine gold and silver wire.

Genoa was famous for bobbin laces.

After the French Revolution the lace industry became almost extinct in Italy. Through the instrumentality of Queen Margherita and other noble patronesses, lace schools were instituted, and quite a flourishing trade built up in Venice, especially at Burano, the little island formerly so celebrated for its lace productions.

Edmond de Goncourt wrote in his journal on September 3, 1870, of an unusual French war casualty:

Things die as well as men. Chennevieres told me yesterday that the stitch for Argentan lace was completely forgotten from 1815 to 1830, and that if it had not been for the long memories of two old maids who were still alive, it could not have been recovered. Even so, there is one variety of this stitch which is lost.

Certain errors have long prevailed concerning lace-making. One is that it is very detrimental to the eyesight of those who make the fine laces and those who spin the thread used in their manufacture. Even the South Kensington hand-book on lace fell into this error, telling how spinners are compelled to sit in dark, damp cellars, lighted by only a single ray of the sun, that must fall directly upon the thread they spin; in consequence of which many go blind at thirty years of age.

The inaccuracy of these statements was proven by the statistics gathered by the Belgian Woman's Committee for the official report on the laces of the Columbian Exposition, made by a writer for the United States Government. They show that the eyesight of lace-workers suffers no more than that of persons engaged in fine sewing or any other occupation that requires constant use of the eyes, citing in proof thereof the number of women past sixty and seventy years of age employed in the avocation.

When Samuel Slater completed his feat of construction of a water-powered machine for spinning yarn, at Pawtucket, R.I., in 1790, he made secure in this country's history his place as the "father of American manufactures".

But immediate recognition and appreciation of the American textiles his accomplishment produced were not his from matrons of the era. They sought imported fabrics for wearing apparel. In their insistence on British broadcloth and French silk, they were not above inquiring of a salesperson, "Are you sure it is not American?"

So states George S. White, biographer, in his "Memoir of Samuel Slater", published in 1836. Thundered White, in comment, that womens' "monstrous destitution of patriotism" in regard to fabrics discouraged the growth of infant textile manufacturing concerns in America.

The shadow of the charm of the "imported" label, for the American woman, still hovers over the United States Textile industry. But, American manufacturers of fine laces to not feel that in the case of lace, the response to the word "imported" goes hand in hand with lack of patriotism. Rather they feel - and examination of the facts supports their contention - that popular thought that imported laces are the laces, is based on falicy, or, simply lack of knowledge.

Why should the word "imported" have any special cachet when the laces of France, of England and Spain, and of the United States are made on the same machines?

The laces of the 20th century are made, both in the United States and abroad, mainly on the Leavers machine, so-named for John Leavers who in 1813 in Nottingham, England, perfected the mechanization of the basic principle of lacemaking by hand. (The only exceptions, in all countries, are a limited number of laces made by hand and lace-like fabrics produced on embroidery machines and knitting machines.)

The Leavers machine remains unique in the textile field for its intricacy although its basic operation has not been appreciably changed in 150 years of its existence. It has been described as "having the strength and intelligence of an elephant and the delicacy, patience and artistry of a spider." The first reference is to the machine's size which amazes all in the light of its product - lace. Each machine occupies some 500 square feet of floor space, weighs approximately 15 tons and stands 10 feet tall. The second reference is to the near-incredible synchronization of some 40,000 moving parts to produce by fractions of inches, six yard widths of intricately-patterned lace.

Samuel Slater's memory is said to have enabled him to reproduce the Arkwright system in America; but it is doubtful, if his aim had been to duplicate the Leavers lace machine, that even his keen memory would have been equal to the task.

Detailed reference to the origin and development of handmade laces is impossible in the scope of this brief article. Suffice it to say that lace has contributed more to the elegance and luxury of life than any other textile fabric. Its story antedates recorded history.

To England go first honors for the development of machine-made lace.

Samuel Slater's mentor, Jedediah Stfutt, is credited with producing the earliest machine-made lace, in 1758.

Strutt produced a forerunner of the lace we know today on a stocking frame, or knitting machine, invented in 1586 by William Lee. Strutt made a material which was lacy in appearance, by arranging for loops to be missed when desired.

A machine utilizing devices of predecessors which produced a stable open-work fabric is credited to John Heathcoat. The year of invention was 1808. The firm Heathcoat founded is today a prime producer of tuile bridal veiling.

John Leavers is said by William S. Murphy, in his book "The Textiles Industries" to have "utilized all Heathcoat's appliances but in a more masterly way."

With the Leavers machine in operation, a problem became apparent - how to give the machine directions for varying and complex patterns. Its solution existed in the 1801 invention, by Joseph Marie Jacquard at Lyons, France, of a method whereby movement of threads in a loom could be precisely controlled. The method involves attachment of a mechanism containing cards, punched for design as player piano rolls are for melody, which directed action in the order called for by the pattern.

The Jacquard motion was applied to the Leavers machine in 1841 by Hooton Deverill. Since then, according to the book, "Leavers Lace", edited by Edward F. Walker, executive director of the Leavers Lace Manufacturers of America, Inc., alterations in the Leavers machine have been improvements and refinements rather than inventions.

It is many decades from invention of the Leavers machine to establishment of the industry in the United States.

Export of the machines, or of the designs and know-how for making them, was forbidden in England. And, despite smuggling of machines' parts, first to France, then to Ipswich, Mass., the English realized greater success in protection of the lace-making machines than had been the case with spinning frames and power looms.

The real development of production of Leavers lace in the United States did not begin until almost a century and a quarter after Samuel Slater had introduced machine textile production.

England withdrew the export ban late in the 19th century but importation of Leavers machines here was prohibitive because of a 45% tariff. The machines were selling for $30,000 a piece.

Actual origin of the Leavers lace industry in this country is rooted in the need of the U.S. government for a source of mosquito netting. Many soldiers died of malaria during the Spanish-American War for lack of netting protection. To ensure against such future disaster, the government declared a suspension of tariff on machine import for a 17 month period in 1909 and 1910.

With the machines came lace draftsmen and today, as in England and France, lace-making is often a family tradition. Grandsons and great-grandsons operate mills in the United States today. Family origins are both English and French and there is general agreement that the lace fashions produced here are as interesting as any produced abroad.

The "twisthands", who operate the machine, work in the tradition of the master workmen of England where machine lace manufacture began. American designers and the draftsmen who transform their art into "commands" to the machine are the peers of any in the world. The American lace industry is quick to experiment with new synthetic yarns and new finishes to incorporate their special properties of crease-resistance, launderability and strength into new laces.

The largest concentration of mills which made up the Leavers lace industry is in Rhode Island. Large mills are also located in New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut.

Penland School of Crafts

From: Paramus, New Jersey

August 2, 1971

"As a new but very enthusiastic member of the 'Old Lacers' I try to spread the good word to as many people as I can.

This summer when I went to Penland School of Crafts to study weaving, I took my bobbin lace pillow with me in order to be able to keep my fingers from forgetting their skill so newly learned. When the word got around that I did bobbin lace, there was scarcely a day that someone wasn't in my room to see what it was all about.

My weaving teacher, Mrs. Louise Todd, was extremely interested. Also, one of the fellowship craftsmen, Phyllis Yacopio, came to observe and fell in love and immediately began to do some research.

Miss Mary Cannon, who is an institution at Penland, heard that I did bobbin lace and told me that at one time it was taught at Penland. She took me to the third floor of the loom house and unlocked a closet from which she brought out all the stored lace equipment. What a shame it isn't being used now!

When Miss Mary heard that I was going to Charlotte after the session at Penland she said that I must look up Miss Margaret Phillips at Matthes, just outside of Charlotte. Miss Margaret was the last instructor in Bobbin Lace at Penland. I did not get to see Miss Margaret, as she was at work, but I did meet and talk with her charming mother and sister, Miss Mary Louise Phillips. I also spoke to Miss Margaret on the telephone. Mary Louise showed me the books and equipment that her sister had used. There is a large collection of DMC and other booklets and books and many, many prickings and samples of lace. I hope that some day the craft can again be taught at Penland." P.S. "I told Bill Brown to give me two years to study and I'll teach lace at Penland myself."

Exhibits by Ethel Cutler and Mae Aldrich

New England Weavers Seminar

Amherst, Massachusetts, July 1971

Last July, at the New England Weavers' Seminar in Amherst, Massachusetts, Ethel Cutler and Mae Aldrich had a Room Show on Bobbin Lace. This was one of several shows arranged by individuals on different phases of handweaving. Each showed a collection of many types of lace: bobbin, tatting, teneriffe, crochet, knitted, and netting. Mae had finished handkerchiefs and handkerchief cases with bobbin lace appliques. Eda Ward added her pillow to the show.

This show stimulated much interest in lace and hopefully will encourage others to study the art. Many asked where instruction might be found and, of course, National Old Lacers was promoted.

Later they demonstrated at Kingston, R.I.

Handicap No Handicap

to May E. Cunningham of Vermont, Illinois

Mrs. Elmer Cunningham, whose general health is not good, has by her determination, overcome obstacles. A spinal injury, sustained when she was a child, left her with a "trembling" right hand that might have discouraged most of us from attempting the intricate hand control that is needed for fancy work.

Mrs. Cunningham's home is filled with beautiful hand work, including tatted doilies, crocheted dresser scarfs, and embroidered articles. She learned to tat when six years old, and still enjoys making beautiful lace and doilies. Crocheting was a challenge "I just had to whip" and did, making many beautiful pieces.

Besides lace and embroidery, Mrs. Cunningham makes braided rugs, does copper work, wood burning, and textile painting.

To encourage others with physical handicaps she says, "Years ago when I was small I wanted to learn to be left handed but my Grandfather said, 'No, child, God gave you that hand for a reason and with patience there will be nothing you can't do.'"

From: Berkeley, California August 24, 1971

"I bought Dorothy Reads's books on knitting and found them very easy to read and follow. The decoration panels specially. Right now I am knitting a curtain out of 11 ply natural linen and 11 needles and it's quite handsome, very open lacy stitches. This has her Cat's Head Design from her 25 Original Design Book."

SAN FRANCISCO BAY AREA

The San Francisco Bay Area chapter of I.O.L. had the July meeting at the home of Mary Griffin of Oakland, California. Mary's home is situated high in the hills overlooking S.F. Bay. Mary's large picture window frames a magnificent view that resembles a giant Old World Tapestry woven in soft earth-colors. A veiling of fog softened this panorama of towering pine trees and stately Redwood trees with the blue water of the Bay laying below, criss-crossed with long bridges. The city is nestled at the very bottom of this tapestry and in the distant background towers beautiful Mt. Tamalpais, this nature-painting is an unforgettable sight.

Louise Leonberger is giving a talk on Bobbin Lace at the I.O.L. convention in Hollywood August 3.

Louise Gutte, our delightful Bard, recited a charming poem of by-gone days, which I want to present to all I.O.L. members.

"Grandma on a winters' day, milked the cows and slopped the hogs,
She saddled the mule and got the children off to school
She did a washing; mopped the floors and did the chores,
She cooked a dish of home-grown fruit, Then pressed her husbands' Sunday suit,
She swept the floor and made the bed, Baked a dozen loaves of bread;
Chopped some firewood and lugged it in, Enough to fill the kitchen bin.
She cleaned the lamps, put in some oil. Stewed some fruit she thought would spoil.
Churned the butter; baked a cake, and then exclaimed,
'For goodness sake!' the calves have got out of the pen!
She went out and chased them back in again.
She gathered the eggs, locked the stable, Went back to the house and set the table.
Cooked the supper that was delicious, Then washed up all the dishes.
She fed the cat; dampened the clothes, And mended a basketful of hose.
Then went to the organ and set down to play: "When You Come to the End of a Perfect Day"

Brazilian Bobbin Lace

These three pieces of bobbin lace were made in Brazil for a wedding trousseau, between 1870-1880. The bride's parents emigrated from England to Brazil about 1860, and it is possible that they taught the native Brazilian servants the art of Bobbin Lace making.

These pieces have been identified as having been made with Swedish thread and perhaps a Swedish pattern or 19th century Saxony patterns. The heavy threads were worked along with the finer threads all in the same operation.

Lace Weed

There is such a wealth of material which one may seek out on the traditional laces. Their history reads with fascination, intermingled as it has been with wars, politics and just the plain personal stamina of some of the lacers of the past.

As in all of our fabric arts, we must learn from our heritage of the past and build from that. Bobbin lace technique presents such intriguing, fascinating possibilities! Such complete freedom of expression! The pairs of bobbins work back and forth, over and under, all the while crossing and twisting. It seems unbelievable that from only two movements of the bobbins one can obtain so many beautiful expressions. I refer to the "cross and twist." The cross is between pairs, and the twist is within a pair. We usually work with one pair at a time or two pairs (but how about, for a new texture, taking whole bunches of bobbins, crossing and twisting those?)

The piece illustrated here is done in only one stitch, the "Torchon", with multiple numbers of twists where necessary. The torchon stitch is; cross, twist, pin, cross, twist....

The inspiration for "Lace Weed" came from a weed found growing in the low, rolling mountains one drives over going from Barstow, California to Las Vegas, Nevada on interstate highway #15. This weed grows laterally to about a three-foot circle which is composed of layers of beautiful tracery patterns; it does not exceed ten to eighteen inches from the ground in height.

In making "Lace Weed", a skeletal frame (resembling the veins of a leaf pattern) of copper wire was formed, twisted and laid on a large felt covered celotex board, padded to make a slight crown in the center. Around this the lace was worked, using a textured one-ply linen in white and another in grey, natural linen color. The copper wire was twisted as a stem and then branched out to resemble the root growth. The whole piece measures approximately 36" wide by 12" high.

The challenge of exploration of the possibilities of this old technique using elements such as thick and thin yarns, varied colors, or heavy against thin goes on and on. And so, lacers, take off--you are limited only by your imagination.

Movement from the traditional to the "now" scene is a primary concern of Lydia Van Gelder. She translates this interest not only into her own work, but also into her teaching of natural dyeing, weaving, non-loom techniques, and "Bobbin Lace Today!"

Besides teaching, Mrs. Van Gelder has served as judge for various California weaving shows and has participated frequently as an exhibitor. She is currently teaching Spinning and Natural Dyeing at Sonoma County Junior College District in Santa Rosa, California.

REPORT

July 19, 1971

"During the course of the year, the 'National Old Lacers in this area have given demonstrations at our 'Museum of Man', High Schools, County Fair, Stitchery Guild and also at an Arts and Craft Center in the neighborhood and at our State Historical Park in 'Old Town', San Diego.

People stand around amazed that anything like handmade lace is done in this country.

Am going to try to attend the meeting at the Sheraton in Los Angeles on Aug. 3." Hazel Scott

Bobbin Lace in Torchon Pattern

This Bobbin lace in the Torchon pattern, was made during the early 1800's by one of the wives of Joseph Smith, the founder of the Mormon Church.

During the mid-1800's, the Mormon settlers in Utah, planted white mulberry trees in order to raise silkworms. The women gathered the cocoons, reeled the silk, wove silk cloth and made silk laces for sale to supplement their income.

From the collection of Margaret B. Leach, Calif. ---Minneapolis, Minn. August 12, 1971---

"I have decided to donate this piece of Mormon Lace to the Historical Society in the Mormon Museum. I went thru on my way here (on vacation) and discovered the skeins of silk that I mentioned in the above notes. I talked to the Curator there and she was so pleased that I would donate it to the Museum." Margaret B. Leach, California

BOBBIN LACING

An informal group of 28 women has been gathering weekly at the Alderbrook Recreation Center, 4509 Lief Erickson Drive, Astoria, Oregon, from 10:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. Tuesdays to do various types of handwork. This week Mildred Urie, seated, a specialist in bobbin lacing from St. Helens, demonstrated techniques to the group. From the left, Mrs. Bob Lander, Dawn Langdon, daughter of Ted Langdon, Elsie Gjovik and Mrs. Charles Linehan, observe. The group has been doing such work as "hardanger" and ancient embroidery; bobbin lacing, needle point, and spinning wool. Beginning June 22, the group will meet at the YWCA to do Macrame and Arabic knotting technique and bobbin lacing.

DENMAN ISLAND AND DISTRICT REPORT By Dorothy I. Stubbs

Denman Island and District Lace Club of Courtenay, Vancouver Island, British Columbia, Canada, had an unusual privilege Tuesday when Mrs. Hassel Schjelderup of California was a guest and showed forty-three pieces of gossamer fine lace handmade with the filmiest linen thread, some 200 gauge, and with the use of only an ordinary needle.

The delicate edgings and collars and centres were the work of Mrs. Schjelderup's mother, Mrs. Karoon Khatchadourian, who was born in Van, Armenia, at the foot of Mount Ararat, once believed the site of the Garden of Eden and now called Eastern Turkey.

She learned the art from an Armenian teacher in a school run by a Protestant medical missionary and his wife who had come from the United States. The work of the girls in the school was sent to the States to be sold to support the school.

When the Turks burned the village of Van, Mrs. Khatchadourian fled with the others to Tiflis, Russia, saving only two pieces of her handwork in the flight. When she tried to sell the fine lace pieces, no one would believe her story that she had made them.

It was only when she and several of her exiled companions demonstrated their skill that notice was taken. Under patronage of a wealthy Armenian woman, the group of girls started teaching their art. At the same time, twelve of the young women began work on the creation of a lace tablecloth for Czar Nicholas.

Then the Bolshevik revolution began, and once again the family had to flee for their very lives, after six years spent in Russia.

She sailed from Rostov, near the Black Sea, for America via Istanbul in 1922. While in Istanbul for a brief time, Mrs. Khatchadourian was able to buy some thread with which she created another two pieces before her eyesight failed for such spider-web, delicate work. One piece was a beautiful collar made after she came to America to wear at her wedding in 1924.

The display is thought to be unique and skilled artisans in fabrics and handwork urge that it be displayed in book form and kept in a museum, protected from handling and deterioration from dust and strong sunlight. Mrs. Schjelderup has as yet made no decision of the eventual arrangements to preserve the treasured heirlooms, but she has shown it to several groups of lace-makers and found them appreciative of the beauty of it and the craftsmanship.

There are dainty lace-edged handkerchiefs, a tiny lace bag of the last century used by Russian children to carry Easter eggs. There are doilies, collars and cuffs and centerpieces in the collection, each so dainty and so beautifully fashioned as to be almost unbelievable in this age of machine-made lace.

Mrs. Schjelderup spoke Tuesday afternoon and afterwards stayed for tea with members of Denman Island and District Lace Club. Other guests at the special meeting were Mrs. V. Schjelderup and Mrs. G. W. Stubbs.

A business session was convened at 11:00 A. M. and followed by a box lunch. There was a discussion regarding participation as a group in the 1972 Fall Fair after a year without entry and members agreed to prepare articles for display next year.

Mrs. C.A. McRae, president of the club, thanked Mrs. Schjelderup for the interesting history of her family heirloom and for the details of her mother's life.

Mrs. Schjelderup found the Denman Island and District Lace Club History book of much interest. The Club has a history reaching back to the childhood of many of the present members, all of whom are adept at pillow-lace and experienced at demonstrating their art both at Island fairs and at the PNE.

Notice came in mid-August that
"RENAISSANCE PATTERNS for LACE and EMBROIDERY" by Federico Vinciolo has been reprinted. It was of 1587 and 1658 and provided lace patterns for work when laces were made in the homes of the wealthy. The author served Catherine de Medici in France. While the present ad stresses value to supply designs for lace makers, it also helps lace students, date designs. 98 plates, paper cover $2.00

In Bulletin of May 1971 (page 78) you can see notice that maybe Miss Whiting's other book
"A LACE GUIDE for MAKERS and COLLECTORS" will be reprinted if enough demand is indicated.
This book contains 144 patterns for bobbin meshes with directions. It does not tell in what types of lace these would be found, nor where used. One admirable inclusion is a large number of meshes designed by the author.
There is a long introductory chapter of general advice to a lace making beginner.

TWO SAMPLES in ONE - By: Mrs. F. Schwegman, of Texas

This sample, made in August 1971, is what I use on Communion Linens. It shows the woven inlay, four of which I put on each cloth, with a bobbin lace border. The lace is made of same thread as that which I weave the cloths...40/2 white linen. Being 87 years young am beginning to see a need to 'slow' down. If any member would like to copy it, I'll be glad to share it with others.

The President's Message

October 12, 1971

To the Good Members of

INTERNATIONAL OLD LACERS:

Already two months have flown since our National Meeting and as yet I've not heard from any member regarding what you would like to have as a program subject, nor whether you would like to go to Belgium either this or next year...unless I have your ideas I will have to go ahead and hope that we shall please you in our choice of action. I have a hymn I like to have govern my general life and it is "Work for the night is coming". I know it has connotations for all walks of life but to me it is my source of drive. Our season of great warmth has passed and now with the cooler weather we can again get down to lace making...I have not had any ideas about the book I feel we can put together for those new to the Bobbin lace making way. I would that we could build up our Treasury with the proceeds. May I have your Ideas?

We have had a suggestion and I feel it is a good one, that we have as our Chairman of MACRAMÉ: Virginia Harvey, our member in Seattle.

I was sorry to learn that some of our members had adverse reactions about our raise in dues but I feel that 36¢ to send a bulletin is a great deal and now that our P. O. Department is contemplating a 9¢ First Class letter our timing has been right...remember it was only to balance out our postage costs.

I wish for all our MEMBERS a most Happy THANKSGIVING if this is one of your holidays and for all good health in the coming months ahead.

Your President

Olga Barnett

A GIFT FOR YOU!

Mary McPeek designed and made the lace reproduced on the inclosed sheet of note paper. When the initial investment is re-embursed she will share receipts with I.O.L.

Ten vellum sheets and 10 envelopes $1.00
If there is enough demand it can be had with blue paper and envelopes where the Christmas trees remind one of sail boats.

CONVENTION SECRETARY'S REPORT

The 18th annual meeting of the Old Lacers was called to order by the president, Ida Woodard, at 7:30 P.M. on Tuesday, August 3, 1971, in the Directors Room of the Universal Sheraton, Studio City, California.

Invocation was given by Beulah Besch.

Corresponding Secretary, Olga Barnett, read the minutes of the Board Meeting. Mrs. Barnett also gave the treasurer's report and the club roster by states. There are 530 members in the U.S.A., 58 in Canada and 15 members outside of the continental North America. Total membership 603.

Vice President, Mary Cole, presided while the President, Ida Woodard, gave her report.

Canadian director, Muriel Mitchell, gave her report to the members.

Report of Mary Russo was read. She reported on the sale of charms and pins. Mary also had suggestions for the better handling of slide programs which may be used by members.

There was a letter read from Sabena Airlines proposing a tour composed of members of N.O.L's, which could be arranged for their mutual benefit.

Proposed Amendments to the N.O.Lacers By-Laws 1971 were voted on and amended.

Article I. The name of this organization shall be the International Old Lacers.

Article IV. Sec. 1 Adopted as proposed with the deletion of the "Auditor". Motion to delete the auditor from the Officer's list was made by Beulah Besch and seconded by Louise Lund. Motion voted on and carried.

Article IV. Sec. 2 Voted on and passed.

Article IV. Sec. 4 Voted on and passed.

Article IV. Sec. 7 Voted on and passed.

Article IV. Sec. 8 Motion to delete proposal was made by Beulah Besch, seconded by Louise Lund. Motion voted on and carried. Sec. 8 was deleted. (concerning Board Meeting at the call of president).

Article V. Sec. 6 Voted on and passed.

Article VII. Sec. 1 B Motion was made by Virginia Olsen, seconded by Olga Barnett that the proposed amendment have the words inserted "and subject to her approval" after the President. The correct wording now: The Board of Directors through committees appointed by the President, and subject to her approval, will arrange programs, entertainment, transportation, Hotel accommodations, and reservations for the same for the convention. Motion as amended voted on and approved.

Article VII. Sec. 3 Insertion into present By-Laws. Motion voted on and passed.
Article VIII. Sec. 1 Voted on and passed.
Article IX and Article X Both voted on and passed.

Article X. Sec. 2 Proposed amendment was deleted. Motion to delete was made by Olga Barnett. Motion voted on and carried.

A motion was made by Olga Barnett and seconded by Virginia Olsen that a By-Law Committee be appointed to further clarify the By-Laws. Motion voted on and carried.

Muriel Mitchell gave the report of the Nominating Committee consisting of: Olga Barnett, Mary Russo and Ruth Whittier.

President: Olga Barnett, Boston, Mass.
1st V.P. - Muriel Mitchell, B.C. Canada
2nd V.P. - Mary M. Cole, Homestead, Fla.
Re. Sec. - Virginia Olsen, " Fla.
Cor. Sec. - Kay Reardon, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer - Pauline Downs, Springfield, Mo.
Director, - E. Lolita Eveleth, Concord, N.H.

Since there were no further nominations from the floor, the nominations were closed. Florence Archibald made the motion to accept the slate as read. Seconded by Louise Lund. Motion voted on and carried.

Olga Barnett presented our retiring president, Ida Woodard, with her gold Old Lacers' pin in token of all the members appreciation and esteem.

Beulah Besch presided at the installation of the new officers, presenting each new officer, as they gave their pledge to serve, with a corsage.

Muriel Mitchell announced the winners of the B.C. Centennial Contest. The winners were as follows:

- 1. Best Design and Technique:
Mrs. Gertrude Biedermann, Cal.
- 2. Design: - Mrs. Eleanora Back,
Chilliwack, B.C. Canada
- 3. Technique: - Mrs. Martha Anderson
San Francisco, California
- 4. Adaptation of a Honiton Pattern:
Mrs. Marylin Laird, Vancouver, Can.

At the close of the business meeting, Mrs. J. Harold Leonberger (Louise) was introduced and gave the meeting an excellent "Talk on Fine Laces".

After the talk, which Louise has promised to edit and make available for publication in the Bulletin, we had a Parade of Lace Dresses and Costumes. Winners of the Lace Show were: Virginia Gordon and Louise Leonberger.

Door prizes were distributed.

Souvenirs given the members attending this meeting included wooden bobbins from Pat Harris and samples of lace on colorful cards by Boston Branch of I.O.L.

Punch and cookies were enjoyed by the members.

Respectfully submitted,
Virginia A. Olsen
Secretary Pro-tem

PORTLAND BRANCH

The monthly meeting of the Portland Branch of the I.O.L. was held on September 2, 1971 in the Oregon Room of the St. Clair Apartments through the courtesy of Pat Harris.

Pat Harris and Myrtle Shaughnessy served a lovely snack to sixteen members. We had three new members; Lena Anderson, Edythe Henze and Gorel Kinersly attend.

Pat Harris had patterns and tracing supplies for members to copy what they chose. Mrs. Coleman, guest, brought three books of old laces she had mounted to preserve. Pat Harris and Ruth Roholt displayed old and new laces.

Future meetings will be held on the first Thursday of each month at this same location until further notice. Pat Harris left September 6th on tour of the British Isles to find more information on Bobbin Lace and meet other Bobbin Lacers. It is hoped that she will return in time to give an account of her trip at the next meeting. Virginia Bryant

CENTER FOR BELGIAN CULTURE OF WESTERN ILLINOIS

The Center is featuring a doll and lace exhibit during the month of November at its headquarters, 1714 Seventh Street, Moline. The lacemakers will be demonstrating lacemaking every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon during November from 12 noon until 4 pm. No charge. Some lace articles will be available for purchase.

During September, this same exhibit was at the Balzekas Museum of Lithuanian Culture in Chicago. The Lacemakers presented a program there on Saturday, Sept. 11.

They also had an exhibit in Kewanee, Illinois, and demonstrated at the United Belgian-American Societies of the Midwest Convention over Labor Day weekend.

DELICATE LACE MAKING

Artists Revive Classic Craft

By Donna Scheibe
Valley Woman's News Editor

Anna Choquette of Van Nuys is a member of an elite corps within one of the most elite organizations in the United States;

OLD LACERS INTERNATIONAL.

Though the name may be slightly redolent of an athletic team, or even a membership given to bracing its tea with lacings of rum, it is neither.

Old Lacers is only a decade old and is devoted solely to the revival of an art nearly lost in this century, the creation of lace by hand.

HOW TO BELONG

To belong one must be either a collector of examples of antique hand-fashioned lace or among the very few women such as Miss Choquette who actually practice the painstaking craft.

Almost all the collectors, and there are about 600 in the United States and Canada, are also members of Doll Clubs of America.

Miss Ida Woodard of Medford, Mass. is president of Old Lacers and is a collector known throughout the world.

As with most members, Miss Woodard came to collect lace because, as the owner of more than 2,000 antique dolls, she had need of it to dress them authentically.

With other collectors of dolls, nearly 1,000 strong, who helped to form Old Lacers, she participated in the closed, one-day meeting of the club held within the annual doll convention at the Sheraton-Universal this summer.

Old Lacers meetings are never public because of the cost of insuring the fragile and exquisite work displayed, but among the cognoscenti of that which is both old and beautiful word gets around that the day has come and bids to attend are sought well in advance.

Miss Choquette, Mrs. Kay Asahi of Los Angeles (her teacher) and only a few other women from Vancouver, B.C. and California were among those who created lace at the meeting.

Others, such as Miss Woodard, Mrs. Louise Lund of Lexington, Mass., Mrs. Olga

Barnett of North Andover, Mass., and Mrs. Virginia Olsen and Mrs. Mary Cole, mother and daughter owners of a doll museum in Homestead, Fla. paid high insurance fees to ship some of the best of their collections to Universal City for the annual meeting.

CAREFULLY WRAPPED

Many of the pieces are taken out of blue tissue and outer wrappings of heavy newspaper only for annual meetings such as this one.

Others are sewn on the apparel of dolls of such value that they are kept in bank vaults while owners are away, or they are on loan to museums.

Among these are the French fashion dolls owned by women such as Miss Woodard, who received many of her dolls from her late mother, a Boston authority on the art of doll making.

Another Judge and Early doll owned by Miss Woodard, made about 1874, has its cloth body dressed in handcrafted lace.

INTRICATE—This is an excellent example of work by Old Lacers member.

MATTER OF CHARM

For Miss Choquette the craft is the charm, as it is for Miss Asahi. Both are adept at almost all handcrafts, with lace-work the highlight of their achievements.

Miss Choquette, a public schoolteacher of math and science, with a master's degree in special education, is now a tutor for City Schools because she can no longer work in the classroom due to a glandular disorder.

She turned to handcrafts to occupy her in long hours of solitude in hospitals for metabolism research and in lonely hours at home waiting for pupils to arrive for tutoring.

Among her creations are woven hangings from every size of loom, hand-tied bags of all sizes in personal designs, patchwork, hooked rugs, crochet, knitted apparel and artifacts. Her Van Nuys apartment is crowded both with the equipment and the result of her numerous craft interests.

SOMETHING SPECIAL

But paramount, and always handy to work, is the "pillow" she made of polyfoam, on which she is making delicate torchon lace edgings. Even the bobbins she is using are her own work, whittled of dowels she had on hand, rather than purchased.

"When you want to do a thing badly enough, you find a way to cut expenses down to the size of your budget," Miss Choquette says.

In keeping with this theory she bought the largest of her looms, big enough to create a rug, for only $28.00, broken and with most of its threads undone. "I bought it in July," she recalls. "I was so ill I was barely able to walk, but I got it delivered to the apartment and it took me until nearly Christmas--to rethread it."

She is now a teacher trainee for weaving at Barnsdall Park where waiting lists grow longer every year. There are only 10 in the class each semester because of the intricacy of the art. Some are men.

"Most of the men mean to go into it as a profession," Miss Choquette says. "For the women it is an art form much as sitichery or other handwork."

FASCINATING TALK

It was at a meeting of the Southern California Weavers Guild each April in the Pico-Arlington Church that Miss Choquette first discovered lace making through an address by Ned Al Hilali of UCLA who made the basic braiding and plaiting seem so fascinating that the young teacher felt she just had to know more.

Knowing more is not that easy.

Through Miss Al Hilali she found Lydia Van Gelder of Santa Rosa College who had notes and directions for basic net ground lace, and she then found Helen Scott of San Diego who developed the theory that using color to learn helps the lace maker see where she went wrong among the hundreds of pins perforating even simple patterns.

And finally she got hold of a bulletin from Old Lacers, International. She felt as if she had found a gold mine. And through it she also found Kay Asahi.

The closed world of the patterns, types and, more importantly, techniques of everything from Cluny to Point Venise opened for her.

The bulletin shares finds, provides a pattern now and then and was the source of a foremost authority on the art: Miss E. Lolita Eveleth of Concord, N.H.

Miss Eveleth, a retired schoolteacher, knows everything anyone would want to know about any specific piece or type of lace.

For a fee she provides students, museums, manufacturers or antique collectors with an 11 x 14 inch book in from one to three weeks, with every fragment of information or detail of samples sent her.

"The books are exquisitely done," says Miss Woodard. "I have no idea who will take up this art when Miss Eveleth is gone. I couldn't do it, most Old Lacers wouldn't even know where to begin."

But some, such as Anna Choquette, tucked away in her small Van Nuys apartment, are giving it a fair try.

TRAYCLOTH 12" x 18" - Bobbin Lace Filet Ground on which the darned pattern is worked is made with bobbins and not in the usual notted netting of Filet.

August 28, 1971

Dear Nat'l Old Lacers:

Am always interested in lace identification, so read with interest the notes on Filet and Guipured Lace (June 1971 pg 92). These illustrate the Filet worked on knotted ground. This, similar to the knotted netting of fish nets.

Since, here and there have read with interest that Filet can be made with a Bobbin Lace ground. Such as in Gertrude Whiting's book "A Lace Guide for Makers and Collectors" pg 159, Buratto, Filet. To quote "The vertical pairs are twisted three times between intersections. The single horizontal thread is simply laid between them at regular distances and supported, at least at every other crossing, by pins, which keep the whole from pulling out of alignment."

Bobbin Lace Filet (Enlargement) showing uncut bobbin lace edging in fringe

Los Angeles. It is approximately 12"x18", a center of embroidered linen, bordered by linen filet made with bobbins and darned in the pattern areas. The edging is a fringe of bobbin lace, uncut. (see enlargement, above).

In this piece the vertical pairs are twisted once with the single horizontal thread laid in with a twist, cross.

To change the position of the bobbins, in the corners of the tray cloth, the vertical threads are crossed with horizontal pair, resuming on the straight sides the vertical pair with single horizontal thread movement.

This tray cloth speaks to me that it is Italian in feeling, does anyone have a suggestion?

I am looking forward to three workshops this fall in bobbin lace, Having enjoyed giving the Loom and Shuttle Guild of San Francisco, and Southern California Handweavers Guild of Los Angeles last spring in bobbin lace. There will be a five week session in San Francisco, a two day workshop in Las Vegas to the Southern Nevada Handweavers Guild and two day workshop at The Fresno Arts Center for their "Fabric Week". The latter two in Oct. and Nov. respectively.

The Doll Book by Laura B. Starr, 1908

Excerpt from pages 128-129

'My lace-maker from Le Puy was dressed by one of the lace-makers, herself, who reproduced her own costume exactly. She is seated in a chair with her lace cushion on her lap, and the cushion, which is hollow and padded on the outside, is fixed in a stand that is perfectly fascinating.

Across the front there is a photographic view of the town of Le Puy and on the sides pictures of two pretty lace-makers. The hollow cushion is used as a storehouse for the finished work. There is an inch or two of torchon lace already worked on the cushion, and the dozen or more bobbins are all filled and ready for work.

The doll wears a little brown frock, black apron and a small shawl folded over her shoulders. The cap is muslin with lace frill and a big bow of ribbon in front. Like all her kind, she is fond of gewgaws and wears a long chain and other jewelry.

The lace-makers congregate together in fine weather and sometimes their tongues run a race with their work. The mothers bring their babies and cradle and tend the little ones as they throw their bobbins about. The cradles are of wood, and resemble little boats; along the sides are enormous buttons of wood, by means of which the child is laced into the cradle by bands that cross from one side to the other. The lacing-band is so arranged that there is a loop for the mother's foot, thus giving her a chance to rock the child when necessary.

In the sixteenth century there was an ancient lace factory in Le Puy; the lace was then, as now, fine, solid and very durable. It was in connection with the factory that the Jesuit Father, St. Francis Regis, who is considered the patron saint of lace-makers, earned his canonization. Sumptuary edicts were published by the Seneschal of Le Puy, which threatened to annihilate the lace-makers. Father Regis not only consoled the sufferers in their poverty, but went to Toulouse and obtained a revocation of the edicts. To this day, the lace-makers speak his name with reverence, and pray to him to help them in time of trouble.

The doll from Arles wears the Arlesian costume complete, the distinguishing mark of which is the big black-velvet bow on the head. She is a dainty little lady and has a face with a good deal of French expression.'

BOBBIN LACE TALK and LACE EXHIBIT given at Kingston, Rhode Island

Early in August, Ethel Cutler gave a talk on Bobbin Lace for the Fayerweather Craft Guild at the Fayerweather House -- an early 19th century restoration -- in Kingston, R.I. Several of those attending were familiar with the art which they had seen older relatives enjoy. But to most lace making was something new. Following the talk Ethel, and Mae Aldrich, showed a collection of various types of lace and demonstrated at their pillows.

"Have located a place where one can obtain steel knitting needles. Mrs. Elizabeth Zimmermann has them in sets of 4 @ $1.00 a set postpaid. The sizes are 2 mm (0), 1 1/2 mm (15) and 1 1/4 mm, --I think they would be about size (16 or 17). She also has 20" circular needles @ $1.00, p.p.in 2mm and 1 1/2mm."Raphael J. Stinson

A LOST ART-ALMOST

Few Can Still Make Lace by Hand

By: Susu Jeffrey, Post Staff Writer

Handmade lace as a fine art can be added to the list of lost arts because of machine reproductions. Now even the famous Brussels lace is manufactured. Few people can recognize the real thing; Bobbin lace, handmade from linen threads.

But Mrs. Elizabeth Groszberg of Lake Worth not only recognizes handmade lace, she makes it.

Manufactured lace is often finished by hand and sold as "handmade". Various patterns used in making lace are traditional. Machines which try to reproduce handmade lace often violate tradition by scrambling the patterns.

"Machines cannot duplicate a picot properly," Mrs. Groszberg says. "A picot is a little loop, an extra twist or accent. It is not an essential part of lace, it is just a decoration."

Lace-making sounds simpler to do than it is. There are only two kinds of stitches used, she says. There is a half stitch and a whole stitch--all the other stitches are variations and combinations of these two basic stitches.

Below: Which is the real thing? Handmade lace (top left) by Mrs. Elizabeth Groszberg. Machine made Belgian ribbon lace (bottom right) was finished by hand.

hold linen thread for handmade lace

Handmade lace is always made with linen threads. Pairs of threaded bobbins are twisted and intertwined to make lace patterns.

Holding two bobbins in each hand, Mrs. Groszberg demonstrated a basic whole stitch; 'Cross' (exchange bobbins in right hand to left hand and vice versa); 'twist' (holding a pair of bobbins in each hand, twist them around themselves), and 'cross' again. Stitches are held in place with straight pins.

Mrs. Groszberg has been making lace for 55 years. She has dozens of awards and recently won the Best of Show Award in the crafts division of the Fine Arts exhibit at the 76th annual convention of the Florida Federation of Woman's Clubs.

It took her about a year to learn the basic stitches. "Like all other hand work, it takes lots of practice," she says.

Mrs. Groszberg recommends learning lace work from one person. She learned from a Catholic nun in her native Hungary when she was 15 years old. The sewing arts were taught in public schools when she was a child, but lace-making was considered "obsolete, so I had to learn privately."

First she draws the pattern for her lace on paper. The paper rests on a pillow to provide a cushion for the straight pins holding the stitches in place. Following the paper pattern the linen threads are patiently interwoven. Sometimes 100 pairs of threaded bobbins are used.

"I work lace for pleasure and give it away as presents," Mrs. Groszberg says. "It's the most relaxing work."

She could not estimate the amount of time required to finish a piece of lace since it depends on experience and how fine or coarse the linen thread is. The finer the thread the more threads are required. "I usually try to work a good two to three hours at a time."

Mrs. Groszberg also knits, crochets, and does petit point, needle point, embroidery and cross-stitch. "But my real love is gardening," she says. "I try to do too many things, though. I can't do justice to everything."

Mrs. Elizabeth Groszberg Knows Real Lace — She Makes It

This detail of handmade lace shows "picots" in the "lags." Picots are tiny decorative loops. A lag is a thread chain.

MADAME STORIE

Inspiring Lace Lover -- from Bruges
By: Osma Gallinger Tod

A rare opportunity for the lacemaker as well as the lace enthusiast is to be had by visiting the beautiful city of Bruges, Belgium, which is one of the most prolific of the cities of Europe in its production of real lace. It is also historically most important. And here beside one of the many winding canals that have given this city the name "Northern Venice", is a wonderful little museum devoted especially to the history and appreciation of lace. It is managed by Madame Van der Hofstadt Storie, who is known as Madame Lace in over fifty countries because of her life-long devotion to lacemaking and her service to the Belgian government in furthering an understanding and appreciation of this time-honored art.

No one should leave Belgium without planning a half day with Madame Storie. I myself have made two rewarding trips to Bruges and my visits with Madame Storie were highspots. She exudes a love for lace, and can be of great help to American lacemakers because of her enthusiasm and knowledge. In her "Little Historical and Chronological Museum of Lace" are cases in which are exhibited valuable collections of old lace and documents. On the walls are reproductions of the portraits of old masters showing paintings where men and women are wearing lace, so that one can follow the chronological history of lace in costume. There is also a large poster where are shown samples of lace in chronological order, from the 15th century until today. This starts with gold and silver trimmings and the first linen trimmings, giving their derivations.

This lace museum is in the native home of the portrait painter, José Storie. It is the only private house which is typical Brugian from the 15th century which is open to tourists. There is a large old attic with its skeleton of beams, which was the atelier of the painter, and on the ground floor are the four vaults supported by a column in stone of Tournai. For many generations old furniture, paintings, antiques and laces have been preserved in this old house. It is open from 10 to 12 A.M. and 3 to 6 P.M. Arrangements for interviews may be made directly with Madame Storie, Lace Museum, Steenhoudersdijk, Bruges, Belgium.

In 1957 the Belgian government sent Madame Storie as their delegate to the United States to demonstrate and promote lacemaking. She spoke before many women's clubs, showing a collection of beautiful laces. In 1947 she was a member of the executive committee of the exhibition, "The Lace of Belgium from the 15th Century until Today" which she conducted in London, Prague and Bois-de-Duc. On a former trip to the United States she presented Mrs. Eisenhower with a tea cloth and napkins of real lace, and gave the president a scrapbook containing all the articles that appeared in Brussels papers during his term in Paris as chief of the Atlantic pact. If by good fortune the lacemakers of America could raise the funds to have her return to this country privately, she might be a valuable addition to an I.O.L. convention. We quote from an address:

"I order you my ladies to wear lace because it gives you prestige and charm" was an edict handed out by Napoleon Bonaparte to the ladies of his court back in the 18th century during the "Golden Age of Lace" when men of fashion wore the delicately beautiful laces of Belgium as cuffs and jabots on their suits of satin and velvet. It was a time too when more than 200,000 Belgian women were occupied in making the famous bobbin lace that became world famous. Altho lace went out of fashion in the next century, there has been a revival of the industry recently, and here in Belgium skilled lacemakers are teaching the art to the young folks.

An interesting feature of the growing enterprise is one group of women engaged in it, older citizens of Belgium who live in "Maisons Dieu" or "God Houses" stately mansions donated for their comfort by the government. They are studio apartments,
